

Carbon Debt

A common assertion made by proponents of wind farms is the carbon saving that results in using wind energy. An evaluation of this argument, published by P.J. Ward, a member of the British Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council college, challenges this assertion. To read the paper, select your preferred format below.