

Wind Farm Development & Nature Conservation

A guidance document for nature conservation organisations and developers when consulting over wind farm proposals in England, published by English Nature.

"...all energy technologies have some negative effects on the natural environment. In developing and considering energy proposals, we must ensure that these effects are not such as to justify refusal of otherwise beneficial developments. It is essential to encourage the right development in the right location".